A Blessing in the Dust

Knowing when to stay, knowing when to leave: this is one of the most challenging invitations for discernment that we will ever encounter. There are times for leaning into the resistance that meets us; times when God calls us to engage the difficulty and struggle that will shape and form us in a way that ease and comfort never can. There is ground that becomes holy only when we remain long enough to see the blessing that can emerge from struggle, that shimmers through only after the dust, kicked up by the struggle, finally begins to settle.

And then there are times for leaving; times when—as Jesus counsels his disciples—the holy thing to do is to shake the dust from our feet and leave behind a place that is not meant for us. This blessing is for those times.

You thought the blessing would come in the staying;
in casting your lot with this place, these people;
in learning the art of remaining, of abiding.

And now you stand on the threshold again.

The home you had hoped for, had ached for, is behind you—
not yours, after all.

The clarity comes as small comfort, perhaps, but it comes:
illumination enough for the next step.

I promise you there is a blessing in the leaving,
in the dust shed from your shoes as you walk toward home—
not the one you left but the one that waits ahead,
the one that already reaches out for you in welcome,
in gladness for the gifts that none but you could bring.
