Ways of Knowing

John said, "I did not know him". Of course he knew Jesus, his cousin, while at the same time he did not know him, he did not know his true identity. However, after his experience of the baptism of Jesus, John could say: "I myself have seen that this is the Son of God." His openness to the revelation of Jesus' true identity was no doubt due to a gradual inner transformation that took place during his time spent in solitude and contemplation. Is this the message that today's gospel holds for us?

'Contemplation is an entirely different way of knowing reality and has the power to move us beyond words, theories, doctrines and dogmas so that we will come to know the very Source of everything that exists. The goal of contemplation is not success, only the continuing practice itself.' [1] 'Contemplation is any way one has of penetrating illusion and touching reality.' [2] 'Contemplative Prayer gradually detaches us from the God we think we know and it gradually increases our awareness of the God who actually is and whom we don't know. Contemplation reveals more and more of the mystery of silence and the importance of receptivity over effort. Silence leads to stillness; stillness leads to surrender. At first our experience may be one of emptiness but we are not speaking of just emptiness, but of an emptiness that is beginning to be filled with a Presence. Perhaps we could say that contemplation occurs when interior silence morphs into Presence. This Presence, once established in our inmost being, might be called spaciousness. There is nothing in it except a certain vibrancy and aliveness. You're awake, but awake to what, you don't know and cannot describe.' [3] 'Contemplation is another word for prayer, a kind of prayer that doesn't seek to fix, control, or explain but surrenders to Presence.' [1]

'Is there anything I can do to make myself enlightened?'

'As little as you can do to make the sun rise in the morning.'

'Then of what use are the spiritual exercises you prescribe?'

'To make sure you are not asleep when the sun begins to rise.' [4]
