Healing

'This week we again see Jesus healing those who were sick or possessed with demons, in the grip of a destructive spirit. In his book 'The Healing Habit', Daniel O' Leary writes about how we can become possessed by the 'demons of the mind'. 'Deep in everyone's thinking there is a drive, a fatal addiction to negative, anxious or fearful thinking which devours our creative energy. It steals our strength and lessens our purpose and power. How we think is the key to our happiness.' [1]

'For us to receive the gift of divine healing we are not required to belong to a specific group or to adhere to a specific lifestyle.' [2] However, an essential ingredient in the healing process is awareness. 'What we are not aware of, we cannot heal.' [1] 'When the recognised need of the individual coincides with the incoming force of the blessing, great change can begin. Divine healing—the blessing that comes when facing the chaos rather than turning away from it—makes way for the wholeness we crave. It brings release to what has been bound; it invites and enables and calls us to move with the freedom for which God made us.' [3] 'We need to believe in another gracious, healing context for our mind's safe thinking, another way of finding a new depths within us and around us. We need to acknowledge our powerful 'hidden self', the presence of an unspoiled and invincible sacred space in the depths of our being.' [1]

Another essential requirement for divine healing is desire. There must be the wanting and that is symbolised by Mary's "Let it be." We always have to state our "Let it be," or I don't think it happens.' [2] "The human heart continues to dream of a state of wholeness, a place where everything comes together, where loss will be made good, where blindness will transform into vision, where damage will be made whole, where the travails of a life's journey will enjoy a homecoming. [4] When we say our "Let it be", we experience that wholeness, we experience who we are, not how we are. [5]
